ECONOMY IN COAL.

Packman Lump Coal stands for economy in coal value. All Lump Coals have a large percentage of dust which are practically waste. Two dust in PUGBURY Lump bears the same as soon as they are cast into boilers. Packman lump coal burns intensely and is therefore a decided economy.

LINE COLLIDES.

PUSSEYFOOT JOHNSON A PASSENGER.

SAVED!

LONDON, July 21.

The eleven thousand ton liner "Remmers" bound from Southampton to New Zealand with 544 passengers, including Pussyfoot Johnson and a crew of 166, collided with the six-thousand ton Ellerman Wilson cargo boat "Marengo," from New York to Hull, in a fog off Portland Bill early in the morning. The passengers were abed but there was no panic. The "Remmers" reached Portland in a crippled condition. The passengers were landed by the "Marengo" which proceeded to Hull.

IDLE TONNAGE.

BRITISH SHIPS LAID UP.

BUT GERMAN WORK.

LONDON, July 21.

The Chamber of Shipping states that 582 British vessels of a tonnage of approximately 1,111,000 were laid up in ports in the United Kingdom on July 1, as compared with 484 ship of a tonnage of 836,000 on April 30, and 1,023 ships of a tonnage of 1,852,000 on July 25, 1921. It is noteworthy that the present tonnage laid up is very similar to the tonnage whereby the German mercantile marine has increased in the past twelve months, namely 1,331,000 indicating that German vessels owing to lower working costs are able to trade while others are idle.

HAGUE AT THE HAGUE.

RUSSIANS LEAVING ON SUNDAY.

THE HAGUE, July 21.

Dr. Nansen arrived and interviewed the Russian delegation members, it is stated, with regard to the possibility of the repatriation of Wrangel's Cossacks who are refugees in the Balkans. The last of the Russian delegation leaves on Sunday. The delegation has drawn up its final report on the conference.

WHAT THE RUSSIANS THINK.

THE HAGUE, July 21.

The report of the Russian delegation to the Council of the Peoples Commissaries on the conference alleges that the breakdown was due to certain members of the non-Russian commission, who wished to break up the Conference as soon as possible, fearing the dissolution of their anti Russian front if it lasted much longer. They are chiefly interested in continuing the financial and economic blockade of Russia and are the main obstacle to the economic reconstruction of Europe, but the Russian delegation is firmly persuaded that the problems that have raised will shortly be solved through a channel just as favourable if not more so for Soviet Russia.

BULKING BULGARS.

REJECTS REPARATIONS DEMANDS.

SOPIA, July 21.

Bulgaria has rejected the Inter-Allied Commission's demands for a settlement of Bulgaria's reparations, including the assignment of Bulgaria's customs, mines and revenues to reparations account. The commission has referred the matter to the Reparations Commission.

DEATH OF AUSTRALIAN COMMODORE.

MEMORIAL SERVICE
ARRANGED.

Rear Admiral Dumaresq, Commodore commanding the Australian fleet, who was recently landed at Manila seriously ill, died at the Sternberg Military Hospital, Manila, this morning.

A memorial service will be held at St. John's Cathedral on Monday (the day of the funeral) at 11 a.m.

ARMY SPORTS

WATER POLO.

The necessary requisites for water polo have been placed in the R.A.S.C. chamber for the use of troops of the Garrison for polo practice.

It is proposed to reorganise the competition for the "Gascoigne" Water Polo Cup to be competed for on the League system, between Garrison units by companies. A meeting will be held on Wednesday, July 26, at noon, at the D.D.M.S. office to make necessary arrangements. One representative for company will attend.

CHILD KNOCKED DOWN BY MOTOR CAR.

A 6 year old Chinese girl was yesterday admitted to the Kwong Wah Hospital suffering from injuries received through being knocked down by motor car No. 268 on the Kowloon City Road. The car was proceeding along the road in the direction of Yau-mau, and the accident occurred near the Green Island Cement Co's Works, where a number of small boys and girls were playing near the side channel. The driver sounded his horn as he approached the children, but when the car was about to pass the group, the little girl dashed across the road in front of it. The driver swerved to the right, and then seeing that a collision was inevitable he immediately applied the brakes, and succeeded in getting the car almost to a standstill before the child ran into it. She was injured in the mouth.

An old farmer was yesterday drowned in a pond in Hsiao-nan village, Kowloon district. He was in charge of a bullock which was grazing at the edge of the pond, when he accidentally slipped and fell a distance of 10 feet into the pond. He was stunned by the fall and drowned in a few feet of water at the bottom. He was hauled out by means of rope but when brought up was already dead.

HEARTLESS HIGHWAYMEN.

RICHES COOLIES ROBBED.

Two riches coolies were the victims of heartless highway robbers last night. In the first case the driver of a riches No. 1035 reports that his vehicle was engaged at the Bowington Canal at 12.20 p.m., to drive to Taihang. When the vehicle got to the corner of the Caroline and Leighton Hill Roads, it was stopped by three men who were walking in the opposite direction. The fare jumped out and held the coolie from behind while the others searched him and took $1.70 in small coins. All four men escaped up Caroline Hill. The other case occurred on the mainland. The driver of riches No. 619 was returning to Yau-mau from Tai-kok-tai where he had dropped a fare, when he was accosted in Ivy Street by two men, one armed with a dagger and robbed of 72 cents and his licences.

The engine of the s.s. "Caddopack" failed as she was proceeding up the Central fairway this morning. She anchored, and had to be towed to her buoy.

Suffering from severe injuries to the head received through a fall in attempting to alight from a tram car while in motion in Wan-chai, a Chinese man is now in the hospital in a serious condition.

LIMERICK FALLS.

NATIONALS IN SUPREME CONTROL.

FIREMEN SENT.

DUBLIN, July 21.

It is officially announced that the Nationals have captured the Strand Barracks at Limerick, also investing Castle Barracks. The Irregulars set fire to several business houses and sniped the fire brigade which troops had to protect.

LONDON, July 21.

Limerick has fallen. The Nationals are now in supreme control of the city. A general attack on the retreating Irregulars has begun. National troops were attacked in different parts of Dublin last night by rebels concealed on roofs of houses. A young woman was killed and other noncombatants wounded.

NORTHLIFFE ILL.

LIBEL ACTIONS WITHDRAWN.

LONDON, July 21.

Owing to the serious illness of Lord Northcliffe, the libel actions by Mr. Walter Fish and Sir Andrew Caird, have been withdrawn.

A message of June 15 stated:—

The recent action of Lord Northcliffe's newspapers from the "Newspaper Proprietors' Association" is recalled by an announcement that Mr. Walter Fish and Sir Andrew Caird, Director and Vice Chairman respectively of the Associated Newspapers, have issued writs for libel against Lord Northcliffe. The Associated Newspapers comprise the Daily Mail, the Evening News and the Weekly Dispatch. The complainants continue to exercise their functions.

HOME CRICKET.

GENTLEMEN v. PLAYERS.

LONDON, July 21.

At Lords three days of brilliant cricket ended in the tamest fashion. The Gentlemen commenced the fourth innings of the match at five o'clock requiring 235 to win of which they scored only 29 for one wicket. The scores of the Players were first innings 330, (Hobbs 240) second innings 334 for 6 declared (Russell 162). The Gentlemen made 430 (Chapman 160) and in the second 29 for 1.

COUNTY MATCHES.

Yorkshire, playing against Kent at Maidstone, won by 166 runs. At Brighton Sussex won by seven wickets from Warwickshire. Lancashire won on the first innings from Worcestershire. Gloucestershire beat Derbyshire by four wickets and Nottinghamshire won on the first innings from Essex.

OPIUM REPORT.

LONDON, July 21.

My Debt of Gratitude.

"Ulcers the Size of Man's Hand."

Mr. F. H. L. is of Mr. C. M. THOMPSON, of 4, Midland Court, Edward Road, Bellingham, England, who writes:—
"In July last I happened to get a bottle of Clarke's Blood Mixture and decided to take it. It was then in the month of October, and after the second bottle, I found myself feeling much better. I continued with the seventh bottle when I found myself completely rid of the trouble. You can make use of this statement and I will be only too pleased to answer any enquiries because it is to nothing else but Clarke's Blood Mixture that I owe my debt of gratitude."

Sufferers from Bad Legs, Abscesses, Ulcers, Glandular Swell-ings, Rheumatism, etc., should know that Clarke's Blood Mixture can give temporary relief in the case of a simple and lasting benefit the blood must be thoroughly cleansed of the impure waste matter, the true cause of such troubles. Clarke's Blood Mixture quickly attacks, overcomes, and expels the impurities that cause such troubles, and restores the blood to its normal state. Ask for and see that you get

MARIE LOUISE.

INDISCRETIONS OF AN
EMPRESS.

When Marie Louise, wife of Napoleon I, fled from the Tuilleries at the time of the Emperor's downfall, she dropped in her haste a private diary, in which she had recorded, with an undiplomatic frankness, her impressions of three State journeys made in the Emperor's company.

The diary was picked up by one of the Emperor's pages, who gave it to his tutor. The tutor in his turn gave it to his sister, by whom it was sold to the grandmother of the present owner, who has now permitted its publication in a volume (with an introduction and commentary by Frederic Masson) entitled "The Private Diaries of the Empress Marie Louise"
(John Murray, 10s. 6d.).

Obviously the contents of this red morocco diary were intended, as the diarist remarks, "for myself alone."
Else the writer might not have been so candid in her comments on the Emperor and his courtiers. Napoleon was as hero to his Empress, who on one occasion confided to her diary:—

"I was in such a bad temper (over a delayed lunch) that the Emperor was displeased, but, feeling quite indifferent, I let him scold as much as he liked without answering him."
"There is nothing which quiets me so soon as this method. They are insufferable beings, and should I ever come back in another world I would certainly not make a second marriage."

That the great Napoleon could sometimes behave in a way that would seem to justify that "insufferable" indeed, like a spoiled child — is shown by an entry made by the Empress when she arrived at Bayenop-Zoom with the Emperor on one of his tours concerning which she remarked, rather bitterly: "When one travels with the Emperor one learns to forget all ideas of pleasure trips."

The Emperor and his retinue on this occasion were none too well housed, with disastrous effect on Napoleon's temper.

"We sat down to dinner at which the Emperor expressed great dissatisfaction with his quarters, so as he could not lay the blame on any of us, his wrath fell upon the dinner. At each dish he remarked,

'What a disgusting stew, if only there were a leg of mutton.' This was brought to him; then he said, 'If only there were some salad'; that, too, was brought. When he saw that the same thing happened each time, he retired to bed."

WHEN THE LUGGAGE WAS LEFT.
The Empress on occasion was equally outspoken about the other members of the Imperial touring party. By some accident of travel they got to Middleburg in advance of their servants and luggage. The Empress, remarking that the Emperor would have to see her in the same dress and chemise during their stay, added:—

"I resigned myself to the situation without any fuss, but the Queen of Westphalia was inconsolable; her women arrived twenty-four hours after us, so she made the unfortunate Comtesse de Livestien stay up all night in the ante-chamber to make tea for her, and when it was brought she scolded her, would not drink it, and cried with rage. It required an angel from Heaven to put up with her. I know very well what I should have done, if I had been a lady-in-waiting."

And the next day, when the Queen of Westphalia made her late for an appointment to meet the Emperor, Marie Louise, acknowledging that she was out of temper for the rest of the day, confided to her diary that:—

"As a rule I am a good tempered person, perhaps too weak, but when in a passion (which happens very rarely), I am perhaps more angry than other women."

"NO DUTY THAN I SHOULD BE."
It was in the same strain of humility that the Empress on a later journey in Germany recorded that:—

"I cannot explain why I was in a very sulky humour on my arrival (at Aix-la-Chapelle), but when the Duchess (the Duchesse de Montebello, her lady-in-waiting) came to tell me whether I would like to see the cathedral before leaving the following day, I refused to consider the suggestion. She told me, 'How wrong I was nevertheless I insisted;
when she told me many home-truths; and as I am no better, perhaps than I should be, I soon admitted my error, and thanked her for all she had said. Such a friend as the Duchess is very rare at court."

At Chesham, where she would not descend into the hold of a battleship lest she should show her legs, the Empress was annoyed by a reference from the stage to her presence in the theatre.

"I cannot endure these bare-faced flatteries (she noted), especially when they are not true, and particularly when they say how beautiful I am."

I only like one form of praise, that is when the Emperor or my friends say to me, 'I am pleased with you,' which makes me anxious to do still better."
Fay's himself, as never more naïve than the modest Marie Louise showed herself in her diary.

ADVERSARIA.

O. Henry could expand this anecdote into literature. It deserves it for its double-barrelled interest.

A bit of Chinese artfulness in the thieving line was detected in a local store. It had long been the custom for an employee to take upstairs a large kettle to make tea for the staff. One day last week the Indian watchman was inquisitive enough to look inside the kettle. He found two pairs of shoes—small ones, I presume. That is a good story by itself; but mark the continuation. The Central Police Station was rung up, and asked to send a European detective. They hadn't one available at the moment, but said they would send a Chinese, assuring the applicant that as he would be in plain clothes no one would know what he was, so that there would be no scandal. In at the main entrance of the store presently walked a Chinese. He was in plain clothes all right, but in his hand he swung with a dreadful conspicuousness—a pair of handcuffs.

Have, as one that ought to know, been asked a question. For the man who cannot see, there is a descriptive English word, blind. For the man who cannot hear we have the word deaf. For the man who cannot speak we have the word dumb. What (the question ran) is the word for the man who cannot smell. There isn't such a word. The affliction, if it be one, was not common enough to call for a name. How would "olfactless" do? It isn't pretty. "Nonosettable" is not much better.

Myths, legends, fairy tales, and so on, should always be regarded as having a substratum of truth and common sense. Jingles that may now seem idle and silly may have been simple statements of fact once. Suppose that in the year 1972 the children should sing:

I told him with a piece of wire
He was an unconvincing liar.
Then with a short embarrassed cough
He there and then did cut me off.

Some philosopher would be sure to happen along and point out the obvious lack of meaning and truth. To be cut off, he would say, is to be killed, and how could a killed person tell about it? In 1972 it will all be wireless, or even telepathy, so that the first line would perhaps be as unintelligible to the philosopher as many nursery rhymes and jingles are to us. For instance, until I had my whitlow, I never understood the origin and meaning of the line:

By the pricking of my thumbs
Something evil this way comes.
Then there is that poem which says:
Fee, fie, fo, fum
I smell the blood of an Englishman
You will observe at once that the ends do not rhyme. If the first words are meaningless, as the learned pretend, there is no reason why they should not have been made to rhyme. "Fee fie fo fum" would have done just as well, if they had been meaningless. But now I ask you to ponder, when is an Englishman's blood smelled? Apart from battlefield! Is it not after a surgical operation? Now if you remember how a young child usually pronounces the word "thumb," you may see the point. If you don't, it really doesn't matter.

It was very puzzling at first to read in a Shanghai paper that "The Peak Hotel, Hongkong, is in danger of closing down." It was decided some time ago by the company operating the concern to give it up, and the Government was then approached with regard to taking it over. Then, of course, one realized that it was a slip of the pen. The writer meant the Peak Hospital.

After I had sent in my "copy" last week, a letter appeared in the China Mail which asked half a dozen of the sort of questions I like to answer. No one else has offered replies, so it is not too late I'm having a shot. The first question was: Why not mustard with mutton? I agree with the writer that it is "jolly nice," especially with cold mutton. We all know, I suppose, the ostensible reason, which says: Mustard with mutton. Sign of a glutton.

But to anyone who will take the trouble to look up the word "gluttony" in a dictionary that is an absurd suggestion. Mutton might appeal to a glutton, but not mustard. I believe it to be open to argument just what purpose mustard serves. Some people pretend it is an aid to digestion; but in that case mutton needs digesting as well as beef, so that the sense would be all against the conventional suggestion. I regard mustard as an extra flippet to tempt the non-gluttonous appetite, and if that is right, away again goes your nonsensical rhyme. Our correspondent will never be told why he should not have mustard with his mutton; if he wants it, because there is no why. There is no reasonable reason why he shouldn't. That "it isn't done" isn't a reason why it isn't done. I know that reason, I think; but I will tell it when I have traversed the other questions. Two of them I can most conveniently boil into one.

Why does convention allow the eating of asparagus with the fingers before forks?

That was the effect of two of his questions. Asparagus is less greasy than the chicken bone, especially if you eat it without that beastly dressing they call Mayonnaise, which no really virtuous person cares for. True. But does that matter when finger bowls are provided? What are finger bowls for? There is only one sensible, pleasurable, and non-wasteful way of eating a chicken leg, and that is to hold the shank between the finger and thumb, and so bring it to the teeth. There is no real reason why this shouldn't be done, though there is a reason for the convention which pretends it shouldn't.

In a sort of parenthesis I see he mentioned corn on the cob. Ah! That's where I live when I'm at home. I sometimes think that if Mother Eve had been tempted with a cornob instead of an apple she would have been less to blame. It wouldn't take a very big snake to persuade me to eat corn on the cob. From this I have reason to hope that you have gathered the impression that I like this food. Now, it seems almost as unreasonable as the conventions I am attacking, but the fact is I fancy corn cooked on the cob faster better than corn taken off. I sometimes eat corn that has been (so to speak) "shelled," but never with the gusto that I gain it off the cob. At the Hongkong Hotel (Grill Room) they give you handy silver skewers, that look like the musician's tuning fork. These you poke in each end of the cob, and so holding it, with clean fingers, you do to it what you intended all along. But me, I eat corn such things as mybs.

Seizing the cob firmly in my fingers, I smear two rows with fresh butter. Then with my incisors I bite off those two rows, working from one end to the other. Then I smear the next two rows, and begin again. At a tiffin party in Hongkong once I saw corn served on the cob, and what I do think the folks did? They shaved the corn off onto their plate with a knife. If they wanted to eat it that way, this might as well have been done in the kitchen. Why should the guest be expected to do the cook's work? There are thirty-nine good reasons for gnawing the corn my way; but I need not bother to mention them here. Sufficient to say that there isn't one valid reason why corn should not be eaten that way. "Oh! but," says a dear lady to whom I presented these sentiments vocally, "it looks disgusting, like a man playing a mouth organ, or like some animal feeding." There are many good reasons why one should not argue with a lady; but if I had done it, I would have said something like this.

As for the mouth organ simile, I suppose it is a matter of taste, whether such a spectacle is disgusting or not. I can conceive of circumstances in which the sight of a man playing the mouth organ might please the angels. I remember seeing a young Indian sitting on the kerbstone in Wanchai and playing that instrument. He was oblivious to the traffic pouring by. His eyes gazed steadily into that mysterious bourne beyond time and space from which perhaps a all come. He was what they call "rapt." I beheld him with pleasure. I always do behold with very real pleasure any human being who is in a state of innocent happiness. But, dear lady, when you talk of eating like an animal, you assume in me a chivalrous desire to speak up for all the dear dead logicians who have tarried with us awhile and left us. Why should an eating animal not look like an animal eating? Were you perchance, thinking of the squirrel sitting up with a nut in its front paws? Not a very disgusting sight, that I think. You were not thinking of that at all. You were not thinking of anything. You didn't think. That is my pet grievance against most champions of convention. I suppose (though I'm only guessing now) that it is unconventional to think. I am in agreement with you to that extent, that I think all eating in public is disgusting. No matter how conventionally you do it, I think you (that is everybody) should do it in private. Eating should be a private, not a public, function. It is a disgusting sight, whatever its conventional refinement may be. The sight of a human being putting matter into a hole in his face must irresistibly compel the thoughtful to imagine the subsequent fate of . . . But, naturally, I would never have talked like that to a lady. As I understand I have some lady students in my class, I will drop this matter right here, and get on to other questions.

Dear, dear, but we live and learn, don't we? The cigar and learn, don't we? questioning (a mighty good way to teach) and this questioner teaches me what I never knew before, that it is not come off fast to leave the pretty band on one's cigar while smoking it. That ignorance proves that I am an outsider. It so happens that my Londones have no bands, so I might never have been found out but for this question. I suspect, however, that this isn't snobbish but commonsense based on experience. The odour and taste of burning paper would be unpleasant if you left the band on till the fire reached it. However, as I have confessed, this was a new one on me, and it may become one of the laws of the snobs as he says it is.

I feel much more THE TEASPOON PROBLEM. ing his last question as a mare's nest. "Why," he demanded, "should one be regarded as beyond the pale because one keeps one's teaspoon in one's cup while drinking?" That also is fresh to me, as an item of society behaviour; but as a practical problem I solved it long ago. I kept my spoon in my cup because I was busy talking to my hostess, or because I was reading. The boy or the maid had put it there, and it was literally beneath my notice, until it forced itself upon my attention. Without conscious contrivance I was holding the thing back with my thumb projected over the rim of the cup, but it slipped off as I tilted the cup in drinking, made a rattling noise, and hit me on the nose. After this had happened several times, I became conscious of it as a distraction, and so formed the habit of taking the spoon out, wiping it on my trousers, and putting it in my pocket. I did not put it in the saucer, because I frequently drink out of the saucer, if I am very thirsty and the tea is very hot. It cools more quickly when poured into a shallow vessel, because (if you think it over for yourselves) you will see that this is so) more of the tea is exposed to the atmosphere. It is only fair to me to mention that I learned this from observation. Not from books.

There is always a reason why a convention pretends that something should or should not be done, and it is a very simple one. Among all the thousands of words we had about snobbery I saw none which pointed out that snobs are analogous in one respect to the Freemasons. It is the essence of both to have secret signs, to distinguish initiates from outsiders. If the masonic secrets ever became public property, they would substitute others for them. I suppose this happens to the conventions of snobs especially to such exotic and mysterious conventions as we have just been studying. When the hoi-poi-oi (Greek for all the people that you don't associate with) twice, catches on, assimilates, and begins to observe these secret signs correctly, the snobs hasten to invent others, by which to know each other. This has been especially noticeable in society since which (with our modern press) soon becomes the property of the vulgar. As soon as the vulgar began to say "varity" for "University," the university men dropped it. As soon as the vulgar learned from Society (Society) that it was unafraid (McWhirter must think he is the only polyglot writer Hongkong can boast) to say "brekker" for "breakfast," Society dropped that baby talk. And so with all other such "marks of good breeding." I already suspect that our correspondent (who is a mere Government servant) was out of date when he said he dared not eat mustard with mutton. For this reason. The glutton rhyme I quoted has long been familiar among the Lower Ordaks; and because of that I would not be at all surprised to find, when I go back Home and mix with people of my own rank; that most of the marchionesses daub their mutton with the hot and yellow stuff, and that all the really superior viscounts now use knife and fork to asparagus. I should certainly be much astonished to find my uncle the Earl smoking a cigar with a band on it, but that really cannot tell against my argument, because he gave up smoking, poor dear, in the year of the Diamond Jubilee. He died in 1897.

I must not forget to give you a story about mutton and mutton that I had with another Government servant. (You see, I move in high circles.) A Hongkong man and an Anzac on leave were lunching at Simpson's. The Anzac took a big helping of mutton with his mutton. "You shouldn't take mutton with mutton," said the Hongkong chap. "Why?" demanded the Anzac. "Because it isn't done," said the man from this Colony. "Well," said the Anzac, "you go back to your haw-haw pals in Hongkong and tell 'em you've jolly well seen it done—and in Simpson's." "I don't think an Anzac would say 'jolly well,' but that's how I heard it."

You know how I hate and hate to avoid any appearance of boasting, EGGS. don't you? Yet it is necessary, for the purpose of some proposals for law reform that I desire to make, to mention that since I got back to full diet I invariably have eggs to breakfast. If anyone is sceptical, I can prove it. Every morning my cook serves eggs, chicken eggs. There is a lady whom I know only as "the egg lady," who calls on us regularly, and supplies us with eggs of comparatively recent date. One day last week she disappointed us, and so my servant went to a grocer in Bowington Road and bought ten to be doing with. It was explained to the grocer at No. 19 Bowington Road that the eggs were for a European, and must be fresh. They were for a very illustrious European indeed, and must be absolutely like Caesar's wife. He swore by all his gods that the eggs were perfectly fresh, and good enough for the biggest fat two in Hongkong. So the eggs came to my domicile. That morning my breakfast was a compromise. I will not dispute my readers by saying what happened when the shells were cracked. Suffice it that nine out of the ten were putrid. For some reason they didn't open the tenth. I think I could guess if I tried. I said, in my lordly way, that the grocer must give good eggs in place of them, or return the money. We had paid full market price for edible eggs, and these were election eggs. Servant came back and reported that he was very angry, very insolent, and laughed at the idea of doing anything in the matter. He said, "It is necessary to show the fellow that he is carrying on business under British law, and must be honest. I would personally interview the rascal. I did. He was not impressed. He said that as he didn't put any date on his eggs, it didn't matter what age they were. I promised that I would show him different. Arrived in town I told the Boss what I was going to do. He laughed. "Don't commiserate the Chinese," he said, "Summons the hen." He is sometimes irritatingly frivolous. I went to the Sanitary Authorities. "Would they prosecute a man for selling food unfit for human consumption, if I provided proof? Certainly they would. But as soon as I mentioned eggs they began to hum and ha."

Im't this rotten, like the eggs? They said they would be obliged to "niggen" divide the bad egg into three portions, sending one to the analyst, retaining one as an exhibit, and handing the other third to the accused. It wouldn't do to take three eggs, as their condition might vary. So they would. Mine varied, from high explosives to quiescent poison gas; and I knew that it wasn't right to ask any Christian sanitary inspector to run the risk of dividing into three portions any egg coming from the grocery at 19 Bowington Road. It comes to this then, I said. This man can go on selling rotten eggs with impunity, because your legal routine cannot adapt itself to commonsense. I who want to analyse a putrid egg to know it is bad!

You might try a civil action, for breach of contract, they said. "But I wonder what the C.J. would say if I asked him to waste his time on a suit for delivery of ten fresh eggs, or for the alternative for the return of twenty cents." He not suppose the Court would grant a hearing, though the principle is important enough. No, I know what I'll do. I'll take the debris back myself, tell the grocer I can't eat it, and throw it at him. It will be a dirty thing to do, but he deserves it. It will make a splash, anyway.

I hurried home, and asked where the lapsap eggs were. I had need of them. They looked astonished; they said they had thrown them away. Filled again. But I know what I'll do. Any time I get any bad money (as I often do) I'll spend it at that grocer's. If he protests I'll tell him I didn't put the date on it, and am not responsible for its badness.

I know there is a TOWN Planning Committee here, but I do not know, for sure just what they are up to. I hear talk of housing schemes on the Kowloon side, and it occurs to me to offer a word of caution. Let us not hasten any steps to increase our population until we can give it an adequate water supply.

One day you are told there is "good news for Sun," and another day you are told of a "reverse for Sun." At Shinkwan, for instance, Sun's general Hsu was reported to have had both a victory and a defeat. Another report said there had been no fighting at all there. The most careful correspondent I have noticed said he was "inclined to give credit to" one of two conflicting reports. This simply means that he did not know. Nobody knows. What with censorship and propaganda nobody can know. I wonder how people have patience to read about it. I, unfortunately, have to.

Glaciers move de-ON WATCHING liberately. So do CLERKS IN tortoises and snails; PUBLIC And the funeral OFFICES cortege stately follows very tedious trails. Sloths beyond our sluggish ocean All rapid movements shirk; But the record easy motion is the Hongkong clerk's at work.

I accuse the authorities of not doing their dam-ACCUSE dest to stop the in-iquitous traffic in arms. I accuse them of being blinded to broad issues by Red Tape and precedent. What is it that we want? To prevent arms reaching wrong hands, or merely a careful cat-paw? The police and the revenue officers here demand a good deal, as is well known, on information. If an informer's evidence can secure a conviction, the authorities are willing to reward him. If an informer goes and says: "I know where there are a thousand illicit revolvers stored, and you can seize them. What do I get for it?" the authorities reply: "Nothing, unless we can convict somebody." To me that is silly. The more seizures there are, the more must the traffic be discouraged. We do not want those thousand revolvers to reach their destination, even if we cannot convict the smuggler. It is because of this discovery that I accuse the authorities of not doing their utmost to suppress the arms traffic. The China Mail made a valuable suggestion not long ago in connection with the issue of permits for arms. Absolutely no notice was taken of it. Naturally, officials scorn newspapers. That was bad, but this stupidity in rejecting chances to seize consignments of arms is worse.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE REPORT.

The fortnightly report issued by the Chamber of Commerce states:— Cotton piece goods and fancy cotton goods.—Unchanged. Nothing doing. Cotton Yarn.—There has been no improvement in the political situation in Canton, and business there is still suspended. Other outlets have taken their normal quantities, but prices realized have been poor, in comparison with those ruling in the producing centres.

Quotations are:— No. 108: $154/180. No. 12a: 163/183. No. 10a: $194/220. No. 20a: $196/220. Arrivals nil. Shipments 800. Sales 3,700 bales.

Un-sold stock 3,000 bales. Bargains 9,000 bales.

Woolens.—The market remains unchanged. Raw Cottons.—There is no business to report and the recent arrival of a couple of hundred bales, is still unreal.

Quotations: Indian descriptions at $30/38. Chinese Staple $34/41 per picul.

Metals.—Market continues lifeless with no enquiry.

Yellow Metal.—Nominal. Nil. Sundries.—Market quiet.

Java Molasses.—Market steady. Saltpetre.—Business entirely as a standstill.

Flour Market.—Stock: About $880,000 sacks.

Quotations:—American Patent $3.70 per sack, American Straight $2.65 per sack, American Cut off $2.75 per sack, Shanghai Flour $2.80 per sack, Australian No. 1 $2.70 per sack.

A successful repertory week will be concluded at the Coronet to-morrow with a further screening by special request of "Black Beauty," a wonderfully fine film version of Anna Sewall's famous "Autobiography of a Horse."

Among the passengers who arrived here by the "Empress of Canada" yesterday is Mrs. O. C. Scott, an American multi-millionaire, and widow of a partner in the firm of Pierpont Morgan and Co. Mrs. Scott is accompanied by her son.

A district Court Martial under the presidency of Major T. O. Lowe, R.G.A., will assemble at Murray Barracks at 10 a.m. on Thursday next to try cases in which a corporal of the 68 Coy, R.G.A., and a private of the King's Regt., are the accused.

ALICE MEMORIAL AND AFFILIATED HOSPITALS.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Alice Memorial & Affiliated Hospitals was held in the Board Room of the Chamber of Commerce, at noon on Tuesday the 18th July 1922.

Among those present were:—
The Hon. Mr. E. R. Hallifax O.B.E.,
The Rev. Dr. T. W. Pearce, Messrs. H. Greenwood, T. W. Hill, J. A. Cox, Li Wing Kong, T. M. Wong, Mok Kon Shang, Cheung Cheuk Li, J. Owen Hughes, H. B. L. Dowbiggin and A. G. Coppins.

In the absence of Mr. W. L. Pattenden who was unavoidably prevented from attending by illness, the Hon. Mr. E. R. Hallifax was voted to the chair.

After the minutes of the last Annual meeting had been read and confirmed, it was pointed out that the new constitution of the Hospital is not yet completed, some points which need revision having arisen. It is hoped that it may be completed this year.

The annual report for 1922 was received, and a statement on the accounts was made by Mr. H. Greenwood A. C. A. He referred to Mr. Chan Siu Ki's successful efforts in collecting funds from the Chinese Community and voiced the thanks of the Committee.

Votes of thanks were passed to Mr. A. G. Coppins the Hon. Treasurer, Mr. W. A. Stephens the Acting Hon. Treasurer, and Mr. Greenwood the Hon. Auditor.

Vacancies in the Committee, mostly caused by death were filled by the nomination of several gentlemen.

Mr. P. H. Holyoak was unanimously elected to act as Chairman for the current year.

The Hon. Mr. E. R. Hallifax read a speech prepared by Mr. W. L. Pattenden which was as follows:—

On reading through the report, one cannot but be impressed with the work the Hospital is doing. The past year has been a record one for the number of out-patients treated, and the same would have applied to in-patients but for lack of accommodation, and the necessity of many staying in longer than was anticipated, and so keeping others out.

I think that Mr. Holyoak who presided at the meeting last year foreshadowed the possibility of the sale of the old building of the Alice Memorial Hospital. This has now become an accomplished fact, and the sale has been effected in conjunction with the To Tai Church as the same lot—the proportion of the sale the Hospital receives is $96,500 and this after deducting $27,000, required for purchasing a new dispensary, will help materially towards the contemplated extensions for which, by the way, sketch plans have already been prepared.

With the present high cost of building, it is estimated that $400,000 will be required for the proposed extensions, so that with the $70,000 from the sale of the old building, and the $31,459.92 in hand in the Extension Account, leaves roughly three lacs to be found. It is a bad time to appeal for funds with China—and more particularly as it concerns us the South—in its present disturbed state, reflecting as it does on the prosperity of this Colony where most of our friends are drawn from; but I most sincerely trust that with a return of more peaceful times in Canton and the surrounding districts, and the prosperity, that should result, not only in this Colony but also to China, with whose interests we in Hongkong are so closely concerned, that very generous support will be forthcoming for the Alice Memorial & Affiliated Hospitals Extensions.

In the meantime, I would ask the community, Chinese as well as British—I see that the Chinese donations are considerably larger than those of the foreign community—to continue to give the Hospitals their generous support. I think that we should see more individual subscribers and venture to suggest that an energetic canvassing campaign be adopted, including the younger members of the community. The latter will not only help the Hospitals but also, I think, it may be a means of bringing some of our young men into touch with a side of life they at present know little or nothing about, not only in Hongkong but also in China itself—I am referring of course to Missionary Enterprise. Apart from the moral obligation there is a very large one on all the foreign residents in this Colony. I feel that even only as a matter of policy it is up to the whole of the foreign residents to support such an institution as this, not only by regular annual subscriptions but also on such occasions as the present to help to the utmost of their power in subscribing to the Extension Fund.

The question of the new constitution is still under consideration, the delay in completion being occasioned by the necessity of safeguarding the powers of your General Committee. It is anticipated however that the matter will be brought to a final conclusion at the end of this year.

Another matter I wish to draw your attention to is with regard to the necessity of increasing our staff to enable the increased work the Hospitals are doing to be handled satisfactorily, not involving too great a strain on the medical and nursing staffs. It is felt now, and I think rightly, that the time has come when the Hospitals should bear the entire charge for salaries except those of the Superintendent and Matron, out of its own funds. This has been provided for and no further call will now be made on the L.M.S.

We record with deep regret the death of Mr. Alexander MacKenzie, Dr. G. P. Jordan, Mr. F. Maitland, Mr. Chan Chau-mun, Hon. Mr. Lau Chu-pak, Mr. Lo Shiu-hoi and Mr. Tong Lai-chun. The Hospitals have lost in these gentlemen some of its oldest and most valued supporters whose places will be difficult to fill. Also, Dr. Eric Arthur Woods who died only 19 days after his arrival in the Colony.

I cannot close without paying a tribute to Dr. I. E. Mitchell, Dr. Gladys Turner and the other ladies and gentlemen, Chinese and English. On the staff of the Hospitals with those named I should like to couple that of Rev. H. R. Wells. Especial mention should be made of the arduous work of Rev. H. R. Wells. I am sure all those who are associated or in any way interested in the Hospitals will agree with me that we owe a deep debt of gratitude to these ladies and gentlemen for the valuable services they have rendered.

Votes of thanks being passed to the Chamber of Commerce for the use of the room, and the Chairman for presiding, the meeting was declared closed.

BASEBALL

LINE UP FOR TO-DAY.

This afternoon the local baseball clubs are out to do or die. Their opponents are the University of California, whom they meet at Happy Valley in what is the biggest baseball affair we have had here. Crowds are expected to attend and lend their moral support. The Californians did very well in Manila during a series of ball games, but the Hongkong captain is confident that his men will give a good account of themselves. The visitors batting order will probably be:—

Davidson 2b

CHURCH NOTES.

THE SIXTH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY.

When Christ rose from the dead His body had undergone a change, it was visible to some, invisible to others. St. Mark tells us "He appeared in another form" and we know that some people had the power to see Him and others did not recognize Him, we know too that this new resurrection body had no need of rest or food, and was not limited by time or space. St. Paul likens the life of a converted man, to the risen body of Christ; but first like Him, our bodies must suffer, gradually sin must be rooted out till at last a crucifixion to all temptation has taken place and sin has no more dominion over us.

It is only by a realization of our own sinfulness and a thankfulness for Christ's forgiveness that we can fulfil the teaching of to-morrow's Gospel. Jesus attaches as much weight to wrong thoughts as the Prophets attached to acts of sin. Graver still are unkind words and Our Lord says that the deliberate expression of hatred is so terrible in His eyes that it may destroy the soul.

And then follows a warning, to all who know they are not fit to come to Communion—don't stay away but make good the wrong and then come to the Altar. "Agree quickly" says Jesus and then by a short parable He shows the necessity of hastening lest our repentance comes too late.

The Church knows how hard are these sayings of Our Lord, but she knows too that the reward shall pass man's understanding and she cries out for us "Pour into our hearts such love towards Thee, that we loving Thee above all things may obtain Thy promises which exceed all that we can desire."

July 25th, is dedicated to St. James the Greater, the brother of St. John. He was one of the Three whom Jesus often admitted to a more intimate relationship, than He accorded to the other Apostles. "Then Jesus taketh with Him Peter, James and John" often came these words in the accounts of Christ's ministry. After He had ascended into Heaven, St. James was the first to win the crown of martyrdom, and as he was led forth, his accuser, seeing his mighty courage and constancy repented and fell at his feet beseeching his pardon. St. James raised him and kissing him said "Peace, my son, peace be to thee, and pardon of thy faults." Then the accuser professed to be a Christian, proving his words by being beheaded, with St. James, by the sword.

At the annual meeting of the Zululand Mission some interesting points were given by Mr. Hawkey, a missionary from Africa. He pleaded for men, willing to work in poverty amongst Zulus, who required living examples of what Christianity stands for before they could grasp the reality of our religion. There is no doubt that if a missionary is to preach a Christ of humility and poverty it is of little use unless His example is put into practice. The speaker pleaded for priests to give up comfortable home parishes to go on to the glorious Christian adventure—he also declared that he believed it would be good to take out to Africa any young man who felt called to the missionary life, in order that they might learn the language while completing their education. He said that he would like to give some kind of answer to a question that might be asked as to why the Church was not able to record any great advance in new work in South Africa. He thought that one reason, apart from the difficulties from obtaining supplies, of money and workers, was the present attitude of the natives towards Christianity. They had not yet come to a decision as to whether they should accept Christianity or not. They were kept very much in their two tribes. As an entire people the Zulus had no cohesion, nor any great leaders. When some great leaders arose, as he would in due time, the effect of Christian missions would be shown. Certain parts of the country was set apart for white people, and other parts for the Zulus. The Zulus could help the white man quite intelligently and capably in farm work but in his own reserves he would not adopt European methods. Had they ever thought what it meant to a young man to embrace Christianity? A Zulu who remained a heathen might have perhaps four or five wives by the time he was thirty or forty. These women would and reaped for him and were worth to him what a Government pension was to people at home—they made him independent for life. If a man became a Christian, he knew full well that he would have to work, and to provide for his wife and children. Either he must be hired to work for some white man or he must learn commercial farming. Churches had to be built and native catechists paid, and he must earn money to pay his part. He saw all the white people out after getting money. The missionary had just as much difficulty in finding money as the mine manager or shopkeeper. If the Church could show some of the Franciscan spirit, and live without money, it might have a converting effect upon the Zulu.

A new Brotherhood of St. Francis of Assisi has been formed at home with a Brother Giles at the head.

Brother Giles has been able to obtain Flower's Farm, Holywell, at a moderate rent and three lay brothers are already installed in their new home.

The aim of the Brotherhood is to offer to tramps, and other people of the same class, a home either temporary or permanent, in a favourable environment. Brother Giles who has initiated the movement, has for several years made a study of the conditions of vagrant life. He has been in close touch with tramps, in casual wards, in common lodging houses, and on the road; he has in fact, lived their life, and won their confidence. His experience has disproved the theory that it is the "lure of the road" which produces vagrancy. It may be pointed out that during the war, when there was plenty of work to be had the tramp practically disappeared, and that in the months when agricultural work is available there is little tramping. It is during winter, especially when there is much unemployment, that the roads are thronged. A walk of twenty miles, or even more, has to be faced in all weather and very often, since the tramp is not allowed to remain more than two consecutive nights in the same workhouse; and this ordeal, continued week after week, gradually reduces a man to such physical weakness that the mind often becomes affected. This process, even more than the surroundings of the casual ward and the common lodging house lead to "inertia, demoralization, and sometimes lunacy." Such is the testimony of those who know; and it must be admitted that the present method of dealing with tramps does little to solve the problems of vagrancy. It is true that there are at least three Labour Colonies in England, and no doubt they are doing useful work; but the disadvantages of large institutions are many, especially when there is a "element of compulsion. It can hardly be doubted that there is a voluntary basis, particularly when they are managed by a religious community.

There are already fourteen men engaged on the farm; their ages varying from thirty to forty; some of them are ex-convicts.

Every tramp who arrives is given food and shelter for the night, and on the morning he is given work to do if he is employable—otherwise he is bidden farewell.

Commerce and Finance. (New York) U.S.A. tells of three children, aged eight, seven and five, who were overheard discussing the details of their "business." There's no use trying to blink it," said the eldest. "we must give up something and I vote we give up swimming."

RESULTS OF THE HIDDEN TREES COMPETITION.

The numbers of trees found are given in brackets after the names. PRIZEWINNERS: Arthur White (11), Olive White (11), Zena Bersey (11), Edna M. Cowen (14), Grace Ho Tung (11), Jean Ho Tung (11), Jean M.W. Foulds (11), Maude George (11), Emily Landolt (11), Elsa Batalha (11), Edna Batalha (11). CONSOLATION PRIZES: Fred Wong (10), Wau Tso Shing (10), Margaret Cameron (8), Parris Rutledge (8), Evelyn Landway (8), Gustave Landway (7).

My dear Children,

The competition this week seemed to be very popular and I was pleased to have entries from a number who had never been in for the competitions before. Some of you found a hidden tree which I had not noticed when I was writing that last story, so you gave me a surprise! It was "nut" which was hidden in the word "minutes". Several gave that in stead of "plane" and I counted it as correct.

I hope that you will all like your prizes of ivory bookmarkers and the consolation prizes (set of handkerchiefs and penknives). I am hoping to have as good results from the ten weeks' competition as well.

I was pleased to have so many nice letters too and hope that you will all have very jolly holidays.

Your loving
PETER PAN.

ANSWERS TO THE HIDDEN TREES COMPETITION.

There was once a man who went for a long voyage. One day when he was at home again he was sitting in the garden telling his children what he had seen.

"This is a wonderful old planet," he said, "There are always new things to see." Crash went something near by!

"What is that?" cried Lil actually Lilian who she was always called Lil.

"Lil," cried Lil, "one of her sisters. 'Anyone would think it was an air-rail and you know that you are not exactly in the limelight on those occasions.'"

"It is the same tree which has threatened to fall down for years," put in their father. "Yet first the branches drop off. What is the matter now?" For Lil gave a scream.

"A bee Charles!" she cried to her brother, "Oh and it away." Charles at once got up and chased the bee away and ran so hard that he nearly fell into the river near by. A race was going on and he heard voices calling "Row Annie. We are nearly there—Row on!" and then another voice telling the helmsman to look out. He looked on for a few minutes and then ran back to tell his family about it. His father had been telling them some adventure and was ending up with "It was when I was in camp!"

When they heard of the race they started off to see it but just then the rain came down heavily. "Run in quickly or you will be soaked" cried their father. And in they all went.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Jean and Grace Ho Tung, Elsa and Edna Batalha. Thank you all very much for your pretty birthday cards and letters. They came as a nice surprise.

I have been asked to put the following in our Corner:

THE MERMAID'S GIFT.

In the midst of some mountains in Wales was a tiny village and at one end of it was a grey stone bungalow where, every summer, a little girl called Margaret came with her mother for the holidays.

Glennymore as the house was called, had a lovely garden full of flowers and on the side ran a trickling stream and half way down there was a tiny waterfall and two or three pools where water lilies grew.

The village was only three or four miles away from the sea and some times Margaret and her mother took their lunch and tea and spent the whole day on the sands and picked by the rocks.

Margaret had a garden of her own near the waterfall and there she grew nasturtiums and candytuft and other flowers and mustard and cress too sometimes.

One evening she was filling her water can from the pool below the waterfall when she heard a tiny voice saying "Oh dear, oh dear, oh dear!"

THE GLEE CLUB.

A TREMENDOUS HIT.

Congratulations to the members of the Glee Club of the University of California. They succeeded in very difficult task, that of raising enthusiasm in a Hongkong audience in the middle of summer. And they deserved their success, for throughout they seemed actuated by the one desire to give the best that was in them. The Glee Club was greeted by a capacity house, which applauded, and even cheered, every item in the varied and lengthy programme. The Club comprises twenty-eight members and they are all workers. They arrived here by the "Empress of Canada" and had at four hours to get things ready. Mr. G. B. Morse expressed apologies "for our appearance" this evening as some of the members' clothes have not arrived. The audience didn't worry about that and settled itself down for enjoyment. The Glee Club opened the programme with the National Anthem a delicate compliment, and from then on kept things moving. The concerted numbers were greatly enjoyed but it must be conceded that the pride of place goes to the jazz band. This aggregation of several well known dance bands in a way that made the feet itch to get busy on a dancing floor. It was not to be wondered that the musicians were loudly cheered time and again. The band included what we rarely get in Hongkong a good battery of saxophones. There are four of the instruments and they make the old tunes sound just different. Then the Club presented a fine quartette party, which had to sing more songs than they expected. A splendidly executed whistling solo, songs and dances were included in the programme while the efforts of the "funny man" of the crowd kept everyone in roars of laughter, especially when he told the story of his marriage.

Booking for to-night is already very heavy and these California lads will have nothing to cavil at regarding Hongkong's reception to them and this Colony ought to be delighted with the opportunity given it of seeing a really bright show.

FIVE CENT DEBT.

CAUSES MUCH ADO.

When a Chinese was charged before Mr. E. W. Hamilton at the Magistracy yesterday afternoon with having demanded the sum of $50 by menaces, the complainant in the case, another Chinese, told the Magistrate that a debt of five cents incurred by his nephew eight years ago was the cause of the trouble, and that the accused had threatened to stab him if he did not pay up the $50 which was demanded.

Inspector John Grant prosecuted and Mr. Leo d'Almada appeared for the accused.

Outlining the case Inspector Grant said the complainant was a foks in an egg shop at No. 5, Winging Street; and the accused who was at present unemployed, had recently returned from America. Prior to going to America about seven or eight years ago, the accused was a hawk in Hongkong and the complainant's nephew owed him five cents for fruit. The complainant alleged that on the 13th inst., the accused came to his shop and informed him that the five cents had never been paid, and unless $50 was handed over to him within a certain period, the complainant would be stabbed to death.

The complainant corroborated the Inspector's statement, and in cross-examination by Mr. d'Almada denied that he was a hawk man and very easily frightened; but subsequently admitted under pressure that he had fainted twice in the Police Office while telling his story to Inspector Grant. Complainant denied that he had had a quarrel with the accused seven years ago, and added that, accused had quarrelled with his nephew about the five cents, but the witness did not interfere.

A foks of the complainant's shop said the accused came to the shop on three separate occasions and asked for the complainant. The accused then said he wanted to get $50 from the complainant as the result of injuries received by him in a quarrel seven years ago.

Mr. d'Almada said that the witness' story was the same as that related to him by his client. The injuries the accused had received had cost him $50 in medicine.

The Magistrate said he was of the opinion that there had been a quarrel, but what the original cause of the quarrel was he could not say. It was, however, apparent that the complainant had been frightened. He would therefore, order the defendant to be bound over in a personal bond of $150 for twelve months. If the defendant failed to recover the $50 he should consult his solicitor and take an action against the complainant.

That seemed a strange thing when there was no one else in sight and Margaret peered into the pool as the sound appeared to come from there. There was something settling under a big stone and, as she watched it floated to the surface and climbed on to the top of the stone.

And then she saw that it was a mermaid, but no bigger than her thumb! The wee creature was combing her long golden hair and tears were running down her cheeks as she sighed, and murmured, "Oh dear, oh dear," over and over again.

"What can I do to help you and why are you crying?" asked Margaret, who, though she had never actually seen a mermaid before, had often come across them in picture books.

The little thing turned round with a starting air and was about to plunge into the pool when she changed her mind and clasping her hands cried "Oh mortal, can you help me? I have been here for days and I do not think that I shall ever reach my sea home again."

"Yes you will because I will take you there," Margaret reassured her. "But tell me how did you come here and why cannot you find your way back again?"

"The strangest thing happened," the mermaid told her, "I was sitting on a rock singing so happily in the sun when a great sea-gull made a dart at me, picked me up in his beak and flew with me right up into the sky. We went so fast that it took my breath away. And then—I think because he must have been tired of holding me in his beak for so long—he dropped me and I fell on to a soft cloud which was floating across the sky. There I lay, too breathless to do anything until suddenly the rain began to fall and as the cloud sank down to the earth in cold drops I fell with it and splashed into this little pool where I have been ever since. It is so lonely here away from my mother and all my sisters and I miss our rock palace with its lovely garden of sea-weed and shells and I do not like the cold water at all."

"But could you not find your way home?" asked Margaret as the mermaid buried her face in her hands and sobbed, "It is not very far away."

"You see I cannot walk," replied the mermaid raising her tear-stained face, "And it would hurt me too much to drag my tail over the sharp stones. Dear mortal, do tell me how I can reach my home!"

"I know!" exclaimed Margaret, "Mother will take me to the sea to-morrow if I ask her and I will carry you carefully in my bucket. If you will be on this stone in the morning I will come and fetch you."

"Oh thank you," cried the delighted little thing, "I shall not mind spending one more night in this chilly pool now that I know that I shall see my home on the morrow." And she sprang into the water and swam gracefully around, waving good-bye to Margaret with her shining mother-of-pearl comb.

Margaret's mother at once agreed to spend the next day by the sea, especially when she heard about the tiny mermaid, and the next morning they were up early.

The mermaid enjoyed her ride in the bucket and on the way told Margaret many tales of her life in the ocean. When they came to the sea Margaret was sorry to part with her new friend.

"I will often come and talk to you," promised the mermaid and she showed Margaret a pool in the rocks where she came every day to sit and comb her hair.

"The next time that you come," she went on, "You will find something which will show how very grateful I am to you for bringing me home again."

And when Margaret came again she found, by the side of the pool, a little heap of coloured sea-weed. In the middle lay a delicate pink and white shell and when she opened it she found a beautiful pearl!

The usual thing—divorce.

Pulsations are supposed to be irregular when a man lies. Because Dr. Lazenby's machine showed even pulsation in the witness above, he was believed.

Mother and daughter who found themselves on the same jury.

When Magharameena Castle was held by special troops and besieged by Sinn Feiners in Ireland, Mrs. Laverton brought her yacht now known as the "Pandora," with reinforcements for the castle, and when the Sinn Feiners attacked the vessel they were driven off, with losses. Mrs. Laverton navigating her yacht during the fight.

Slapped a naval officer's face, because he said she wasn't a lady. Now, what did that prove?

The bright smile that haunts.
